

Let's start imagining our internet...

That prescribes indivisible and equitable access to information to all individuals as a human right.

That encourages multicultural and ethnically & religiously diverse content.

That would encourage the creation of a space where gender expression can thrive without threat and intimidation and is inclusive of progressive associations amongst them

Where free speech should be inclusive of diverse conversations which form connections across cultural, geographical and linguistic barriers and harbours a tolerant equal space for such connections to breed.

Free online speech empowers a community that can form associations for social, cultural, political purposes without the fear of reprisals.

That must function on the principles of human rights and social justice which should be governed through transparent and inclusive mechanisms that encourage diversity

This is the beginning...

We hope to develop this Citizen Charter of the Internet...
